Interview with Bob Howsam

Q. You have the reputation of being a tough bargainer. What is your philosophy?

A. We try to be fair to everyone. We have budgets. And we have a budget for player salaries just like we have budgets for our promotions, publicity and stadium operations departments. We approach salaries based on performance, but we also try to be fair when other things enter in. We try to take the career into consideration, rather than just the previous season. And we do this while at the same time trying to keep our organization economically sound.

Q. What goes into making a trade?

A. Actually, about 2800 to 3000 hours. We figure that our staff — under control.

You don't need a rain check when you specify Powell Valves.

Because they're a better way to handle whatever you control. Water. Oil. Gas. Air. Steam. Corrosive fluids.

We put 126 years of manufacturing know-how into building industrial valves that give trouble-free service.

Reds Radio Network

The Reds Radio Network is under the direction of John Soller, Reds director of broadcasting. Al Michaels, in his second year, and the ole lefthander, Joe Nuxhall, are the play-by-play announcers. Prime network sponsor is the Stroh Brewery Company. Network co-sponsor is Marathon Oil. Participating network sponsors are Conwood Tobacco and Frisch's. Flagship station on the seven-state network is 50,000-watt, clear channel WLW, 700 on the dial. Sponsors on WLW are Stroh's, Marathon, Frisch's, Pepis-Cola, and First National Bank of Cincinnati.

CAN YOU
THROW A BALL?

When the pitcher throws a strike, the ball moves in FIVE directions at these FIVE different speeds: (1) The spin or twirl of the ball on its own axis at the slowest of the five speeds; (2) Toward the batter or catcher at the next speed; (3) With the earth's rotation of approximately 1,000 miles per hour; (4) With the earth's orbit around the sun at 67,000 miles per hour; (5) With the solar system, which travels 43,000 miles per hour toward the star, Vega.

Big days set for 1972

From the gala National League opener on April 5 to the final game, the 1972 season promises to be an exciting one for fans coming to Riverfront Stadium.

And fans will want to mark their calendars with notes about the special days.

More than 50,000 teenagers took advantage of special Teen Nite price in 1971. Again this year, three Teen Nites are scheduled, and each will feature entertainment prior to the game. The dates are April 14 (Los Angeles), May 12 (St. Louis), July 7 (Chicago).

College Nite is set for May 5 when the Reds meet Pittsburgh, and entertainment will precede the game.

Bat Day is always one of the biggest days of the year. This year's date is set for April 16, when the Reds meet the Dodgers. Youngsters 14 and under accompanied by a separate paying adult will get a free Louisville bat suitable for little league play.

The first Old Timers Game proved such a hit last season that another will be played this year. The date is Saturday, June 17. The Old Timers preliminary game gives dad a chance to show his son the stars of the past.

Three Businessmen's Specials are on the schedule: April 12 (San Francisco), May 10 (Chicago) and May 24 (Atlanta). All are on Wednesday and start at 12:30 p.m. They give the businessman a chance to take a long lunch hour at the stadium, see the game, and get back to the office to take care of last minute details.

Six Senior Citizens dates are set: April 12 (San Francisco), May 10 (Chicago), May 24 (Atlanta), June 21 (Montreal), July 13 (Pittsburgh), and September 30 (Los Angeles).

Additional promotions will be announced during the season.

Hall of Fame

Baseball's Hall of Fame, established at Cooperstown, N. Y. in 1939, enshrines baseball's greats like Cincinnati Reds (at left) Bill McKechnie, Eppa Rixey and Eddie Roush. The museum is open year round seven days a week, except Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day. A trip to Cooperstown and a stroll down baseball's memory lane is a must for any baseball fan.

Reds notes

The official Pitch, Hit & Throw competition, sponsored by Major League Baseball and the Phillips Petroleum Company, attracted more than 700,000 boys age 9 thru 12 in its first two years. And 1972 figures to be the biggest year ever!

Youngsters enter local competition and compete in three areas: pitching for accuracy, hitting for distance, throwing for distance and accuracy. Winners advance to higher levels and finals are held at the All-Star Game. The Cincinnati District Competition is set for June 25 at Riverfront. Eligible youngsters can enter at Phillips service stations or any authorized PH&T center.

The Rosie Reds membership rolls hit the 3,000-maximum earlier than ever and President Carol Ross has already started a waiting list for 1973. The Rosies announced they will continue to donate $500 scholarships to the University of Cincinnati and Xavier and will expand their program this year to include Miami and Dayton. Other officers this year are Vice-president Connie Malas, Secretary Jean Morrison, Treasurer Bessy Ann Berry.

The 1972 All-Star teams will again be selected by the fans. The balloting will be during the four weeks prior to the game, set for July 25 in Atlanta. Ballots will be available at the Stadium, Reds ticket outlets, and most Gillette retailers.

Baseball lifeline is farm system

The lifeline of any major league baseball team is its farm system. The Cincinnati Reds are no exception.

Five minor league teams make up the Reds farm system. Two of them won division crowns last year (Indianapolis in the American Association and Three Rivers in the Eastern League). A third club, Tampa in the Florida State League, made it to the playoffs. The Reds also field a pair of rookie teams in Florida at Bradenton in the Gulf Coast League and Melbourne in the Florida East Coast League.

All five managers will return from last year. Vern Rapp will pilot Indianapolis, Jim Snyder Three Rivers, Russ Nixon Tampa, Ron Plaza Bradenton and Dave Pavlesic Melbourne.

The Reds have approximately 100 players on the five clubs. Although there are exceptions, it takes about four and one-half years to develop a major league player.

Generally, the process begins in the lower classifications, i.e., the rookie leagues. The rookie leagues, similar to the Class D leagues of the old days, play abbreviated summer schedules. The Gulf Coast League, for instance, begins in July and ends late in August. Much of the time there is spent in fundamental instruction.

As a player progresses, he moves up the organization's ladder. The next step in the Cincinnati chain is at Tampa in the Class A Florida State League. This league is dominated by more experienced professional players and older signees who played quite a bit of college ball.

A player might spend a year, or even two, there before advancing to the Class AA level. That stop on the Reds road to the majors is at Three Rivers which plays in the Eastern League.

This classification separates the men from the boys. It is not rare for a player to jump from Double-A to the majors in one quick move. Age, experience and advanced ability make the competition in AA extremely keen.

The final step to the majors is at the AAA level, which in Cincinnati's case, is Indianapolis of the American Association. This caliber of play is generally the stepping stone to greater heights.

The Reds also participate in the Florida Instructional League which furthers the development of its players. In addition to playing a competitive fall schedule, hundreds of hours are devoted to fundamental instruction. This program is considered one of baseball's best and quite often a player can jump one or more classifications with intensified Instructional League work.

General Manager Bob Howsam has said many times that within the next three years the Reds should have minor league players challenging at all positions. Nothing more could typify a strong farm system.

The Reds minor leaguers compiled the second highest winning percentage last year, .553 (298 wins and 241 losses), among all 24 organizations. It is up to the farm system to develop the players and it appears the Reds are headed in that direction.

Take me out to

Had George Wright ever daydreamed aloud back in 1869 and suggested that the professional Cincinnati Red Stockings he was organizing would someday play in a circular riverfront stadium spanning four city blocks, his sanity might have been challenged.

Yet there it stands, forcefully yet majestically dominating the city skyline.

Beautiful Riverfront Stadium.

Historic Crosley Field served well, absorbing heavy coats of paint in her final days to hide the years of age.

The move to Riverfront Stadium came in late June of 1970. More than 50,000 first-nighters showed up, and more than two million have followed them in the short season and one-half the stadium has been open for baseball.

The atmosphere seems different. The clean new park with # the ball game

its 10,000 nearby parking spaces and interstate highway access beckon the fan from neighboring cities. Young marrieds and singles on dates are much more prominent at Riverfront, which is an easy walk to and from Cincinnati restaurants and pubs.

The stadium is a gold mine to the trivia buff, who thinks in terms of 48 acres, 24,000 scoreboard lights, 10,000 tons of structural steel, 13,000 tons of reinforcing steel, 175,000 cubic yards of concrete and 1728 1,000-watt vapor lamps for lighting.

The Stadium's first year and one-half of baseball saw an all-star game, a championship series and finally a world series, but that was only the beginning for the Cincinnati Reds new Riverfront Stadium.

Bernie Carbo

Winter baseball has helped Bernie Carbo (above) in past years. The Reds are hoping that winter activity will once again help the lefthanded hitting outfielder. Carbo played in Puerto Rico prior to the 1969 and 1970 seasons. It was a plus. He won the American Association batting title in 1969 at .359 and hit .310 in 1970 with the Reds winning the Sporting News Rookie of the Year Award. Bernie didn't play in the winter of 1970-71 and his mark dropped to .219 last year.

Hal McRae

Hal (upper left) began his professional career as an infielder after signing in 1965. Two years later he was converted to an outfielder, but this year he could return to the infield as a swing man. Ability to play both the infield and outfield will make him much more valuable. Hal improved in all categories last year. His batting average jumped from .248 to .264 and he upped his home run total from eight to nine. His RBI total went from 23 to 34.

Ted Uhlaender

Better balance in the outfield was attained when Ted Uhlaender (left) was acquired from Cleveland. He batted .288 last year, the 10th best average in the American League. He has the reputation as a contact hitter. He has averaged only 44 strikeouts in six seasons as a regular or one in every 10.6 times at bat. A graduate of Baylor University, Uhlaender was originally signed by Minnesota in 1961.

Tony Perez

Tony moved diagonally across the diamond once in 1967. This spring when he makes the return trip from third base to first, it should be much easier for the 29-year old slugger.

The Cuban Comet will be back home at first base as a result of the trade that sent Lee May to Houston. Tony, a natural first baseman, became the regular third sacker five springs ago.

If the move wasn't to his liking, he never let it show. Tony became one of the top power hitters in baseball. His production dropped off slightly in 1972, but he still ranked among the tops. He smashed 25 home runs, knocked in 91 runs and batted .269. It was the fifth consecutive year he had 90 or more RBIs.

A poor start prevented Tony from batting .300 for the second straight year. As late as June 3 he was hitting only .208, but then went on a rampage. A sore right hand didn't help Perez early. Whirlpool and diathermy treatments didn't help. Sharp pains shooting up his hand and wrist prevented Tony from swinging the bat properly. Each time his middle and ring fingers parted the pain was intense.

Finally he began wearing a glove with two fingers sewn together and the results were almost instantaneous. His average shot up and he was off to the best second half of his career. Between June 21 and August 30 he hit in 57 out of 69 games. His average zoomed from .227 to .283. He collected 96 hits in 253 times at bat and in one 30-game stretch knocked in 33 runs.

Tony passed a milestone in 1970, getting his 1,000th career hit, a single August 24 at Chicago. He also became a citizen of the United States last October.

Pat Corrales

The major asset of Pat Corrales (right) is backing up Johnny Bench. Although not a strong hitter, Corrales is a valuable back up receiver. The Reds won 17 of the 29 games he started last year. In his fifth year with the Reds, Corrales is pointing to a managerial career someday. He is a student of the game. "When you sit and watch you pick up the little things that are a great help to you. When you don't have great talent you have to use your head."

Bill Plummer (above)

Waiting in the wings obviously hasn't dampened Bill Plummer's enthusiasm. The 24-year old reserve catcher had his finest season as a professional in 1971. Playing for Indianapolis he socked 17 home runs and batted .266. Bill opened the season with the Reds, but was optioned out to play every day. He came to the Reds from Chicago after the 1968 season.

Clay Carroll (right)

Clay established himself as one of baseball's top relief pitchers last year. He earned a berth on the All-Star team, had a 10-4 record and posted a 2.49 ERA. Clay had a brilliant stretch in mid-summer. He worked 15.1 innings between June 28 and July 31 and didn't allow a run. Against the Mets he was murder. He appeared in eight games, pitched 10 innings and didn't give up a run. "I just go out there and do the job for the team," Carroll said. "I can't put my finger on any reason I had such a good year except that I pitched a lot." Nicknamed "The Hawk", Clay earned the name from his hawk-like nose.

Jim Merritt

Southpaw Jim Merritt (upper left) struggled through 1971 losing 11 straight games before gaining his lone win. But he held his head high, kept a good attitude and remained optimistic that his fortunes would change. They did late in the season and the crafty veteran displayed signs that he would rebound in 1972. He hurled 21.2 straight scoreless innings in August and September. In his last nine games he allowed just 17 hits in 23.1 innings. Jim's win came August 21 against the Pirates. "That win," Jim noted, "felt as big as No. 20 did in 1970." It was in 1970 that Jim became the first Reds lefty to win 20 games in 45 years.

Tom Hall

Strikeout is a big word when talking about Tom Hall (lower left), the young lefthander acquired from Minnesota. He fanned 137 batters in 130 innings in 1971 and was the top strikeout artist among pitchers who started games in 1970 with a 1.19 ratio. Hall's fast ball is compared to Don Gullett's. A pitching rating system developed by George Sisler, Sr. and his son George, Jr., ranked Hall No. 1 in the major leagues in 1970. The 1970 ratings called Hall more "efficient" than runners-up Tom Seaver, Dick Selma, Fergie Jenkins, Bill Singer and Sam McDowell.

Wayne Simpson

Wayne is bent on regaining the touch that made him baseball's best pitcher the first half of 1970. Most of last season was hard to take. His shoulder was slowing coming around after his injury the year before. His control wasn't good and Wayne was sent to Indianapolis May 13 to pitch himself into shape. "At Indianapolis I got to throw a lot between games. Just throwing one ball after another and thinking about my motion until it was right was a big help to me." He came back to the Reds June 15 and still wasn't the pitcher he was in 1970 when he had a 13-1 record in July, but there were encouraging signs. After he hurled 6.2 scoreless innings Sept. 6, catcher Johnny Bench said: "That was the Simpson who won 13 of his first 14 games in 1970. Wayne's fastball was alive . . . sailing a lot." Wayne added: "You can forget last year. I am. You're going to see me throw the way I did in 1970."

Jim won only eight games in 1971, but he was a better pitcher than his record indicates. His ERA was a respectable 3.22 and he had six complete games, second most on the staff. When Jim was on the mound his teammates scored few runs. In his 12 losses the Reds scored just 17 times. Jim was in and out of the rotation all season. Mac missed a half dozen starts between the middle of May and mid-June when a sore elbow temporarily stopped him. He failed to hit the 200 mark in innings pitched for the first time in four years. He worked 171. Jim came to Cincinnati in 1970 from California. His six shutouts in 1967 tied for the American League lead and that same year was selected to pitch in the All-Star game.

Don Gullett

Few adjectives are capable of describing the Don Gullett (left) who pitched in 1971. Sensational, scintillating, stupendous are just a few. Don entertained thousands of fans at Riverfront Stadium last year. His home record was 10-1 with a 1.67 ERA. He nearly hurled a no-hitter. He held Chicago hitless for 7.1 innings Aug. 13 before Cleo James spoiled the bid with a bloop double. His next start was a shutout against Bob Gibson. Overall, Don was 16-6 with a 1.65 ERA. He had three shutouts. Learning to throw a slider helped Don's progress. The 21-year old lefty began throwing it like a forward pass and the result was a pitch that broke down and away. Except for two games in May, Don was in command of the season. "He's still learning," Manager Sparky Anderson, "therefore he's still making mistakes. But it's going to be a pleasure to watch him when he's getting all his pitches over in a couple of years."

Pedro Borbon

(upper right)

Pedro is considered a fine pitching prospect and he didn't do anything to dispute this in 1971. He was one of the top American Association pitchers at Indianapolis with a 12-6 record and during winter league play posted the top ERA in the Dominican League, 1.60. Pedro has been in the majors on three different occasions. He had brief trials with the Reds in 1970 and 1971 and spent the 1969 season with California.

Joe Gibbon

(lower right)

Joe was surprise of the Reds pitching staff last year. Released by the Pirates after the 1970 season, Gibbon rebounded to provide steady relief from the left side. Joe worked 50 games, second high in his long career. His 2.93 earned run average was one of his best ever. In one stretch between May 10 and June 24 he pitched 16.1 innings without allowing a run. The opposition managed only six hits and Joe collected five saves in the span.

Sparky learned the hard way. He spent all but one of his 11 playing seasons in the minor leagues. He knows about long bus rides. And bad lights. And bad infields.

But that's the way he learned his baseball and that's the reason he's manager of the Cincinnati Reds. Wrote Dayton Daily News Sports Editor Si Burick: "Sparky learned in the minors that baseball is a scientific game. He learned that the game is based on fundamental concepts which if drilled constantly into players will prevent the losing of an occasional close game. This devotion to small detail helped Sparky gain his job with the Reds. Cincinnati wanted a fundamentalist, not a big shot who might assume that because a man had reached the big league level he automatically knew the fine points. Even if players do, which most don't, they need re-minding. Sparky sort of an unknown got the job. He still reminds 'em."

When Anderson was named manager Oct. 9, 1969, it climaxed a whirlwind 24 hours. Within that period he was a member of three different organizations. A third base coach for San Diego in 1969, he accepted an offer to coach for California Oct. 8, 1969. The following day he was named manager of the Reds.

Sparky and Reds General Manager Bob Howsam were first united in 1965 when Sparky was hired to manage at Rock Hill. He promptly won a pennant there and followed that act with first place finishes at St. Petersburg, Modesto and Asheville.

"There are some people who would rather follow," Sparky said. "But me, I'd rather lead." That simple statement sums up the Reds manager.

Bobby Tolan (right)

There is no doubt in Bobby Tolan's mind that he'll return to the starting lineup in 1972. "You can mark down Tolan and Rose in two of the spots," Bobby said one afternoon during the winter. "The others can battle it out." Tolan missed the entire 1971 season with a torn Achilles tendon. In fact, he undid it twice. The first time came Jan. 7 in a basketball game at Frankfort, Ky. The second was May 7 while running in the outfield at Dodger Stadium. Tolan was a big reason the Reds won the 1970 pennant. He batted .316, slammed 16 home runs, knocked in 80 runs and led the major leagues with 57 stolen bases.

Cesar Geronimo

A strong arm and fast feet are two key ingredients of a good ball player and newly acquired Cesar Geronimo (upper right) possesses both. A lefthanded hitter, Geronimo was used primarily as a pinch-runner and late inning defensive replacement by Houston. But he has shown signs of developing into a capable hitter. He posted the eighth best average in the Dominican League this winter, .293. Cesar made the big jump from Class A to the major leagues in one season. He was drafted by Houston after the 1968 season off the Yankees' Syracuse roster and spent the entire 1969 season with the Astros after playing 1968 at Ft. Lauderdale.

George Foster (left)

He was acquired from San Francisco last summer to fill the centerfield void created by Bobby Tolan's absence. He didn't match Tolan's output the previous year, but the quiet, young Foster showed signs of developing into a top notch player. He batted .241 in his first full season and added 23 doubles and 13 homers. George broke in like a house afire with the Reds. After the first 19 games he was hitting .354, tailed off, and then rebounded to bat .280 in August. He was a big pest to his former teammates. He hit four home runs and knocked in eight runs against the Giants.

Johnny Bench

The fact can't be hidden: Johnny Bench didn't have a good year. That is, by Johnny Bench standards. But compared to that of most other catchers in baseball, it ranks near the top. The 24-year old backstop batted only .238, but still hit 27 home runs, the third straight year he hit 25 or more. He didn't repeat the 1970 year when he was Most Valuable Player and led the major leagues with 45 home runs and 148 RBI. So it was off to the Florida Instructional League after the season finished.

"I want to learn the strike zone much better," Bench said near the end of last season. Manager Sparky Anderson explained: "He has to learn to contain himself at the plate. Time and again I've seen him go for pitches out of the strike zone. Between his anxiety and the way pitchers worked him over, he had a terrible time. But Johnny has too much natural ability to have that kind of year again. All of it wasn't his fault and I'll promise it won't happen again."

Bench felt that he may have rested a bit on his laurels. "I took too much for granted last year," Bench noted. "People expect an awful lot of you when you have a season like I had in 1970. I'll probably never have another that great. I started pressing this year and that made it worse."

Johnny got off to a flying start, even though he was late reporting to spring training. He hit nine home runs in April and batted .312 in the first month. But then he noticed something awry.

"I hit two home runs against Marichal one night and we lost," Bench explained. "That told me something right there that things weren't going to be the way they were in 1970."

Johnny continued to belt the long ball and cracked his 100th career home run May 17 against Jim Bunning. He slowed down thereafter and in mid-July was hindered by a sore wrist that saw him sit out an entire week.

Bench admits that he likes to use his power. "I swing as hard as anyone. At 210 pounds with the right swing you should be able to hit home runs."

It was Bench's swing last year that hurt him batting coach Ted Kluszewski theorized. "He was trying to sweep the ball out of the park instead of just meeting it with a good, compact short stroke like he had in 1970."

Although John dropped at the plate, he won his fourth straight Golden Glove and was named to the All-Star team for the fourth consecutive year.

Denis Menke

Steady defensive play makes dependable veteran Denis Menke a vital and valuable addition to the Reds infield. A former bonus baby with the Milwaukee Braves, he has performed capably at all infield positions throughout his career. And he can play the outfield, too. Signed by Milwaukee in 1958, Menke became a Braves regular in 1963. He never realized his potential, however, until he was dealt to Houston in 1968. He did hit 20 home runs in 1964, but it was at age 30 that he had his finest season in the major leagues. Menke batted .304 in 1970 and drove in 92 runs for the Astros. "I'm not saying I'm a .300 hitter," Menke said during the winter, "but I know I can hit better than I did last year (.246). I think that I was too eager to prove my .300 season was no fluke." Menke is no stranger to Manager Sparky Anderson. They were teammates at Toronto in 1962.

Darrel Chaney

Shortstop Darrel Chaney was sent out to Indianapolis to play regularly in 1971. He responded with his career high batting average, .277. That bested his previous top average by 45 points as he played regularly for the first year since 1968. Darrel was an All-American high school quarterback at Hammond, Ind., and spurned 35 scholarships to sign with the Reds. He was the No. 2 draft choice in 1966.

Dave Concepcion

The 1971 season started off on the wrong foot for David Concepcion and the shortstop never could get on track. He suffered torn ligaments during spring training and joined the Reds two weeks late. He never reached the point he attained in 1970 when he batted .260. David appeared in 130 games last year, mostly as a pinch-runner or late-inning defensive replacement. The lanky Venezuelan stole nine bases.

The "in place" to be during the summer is at Riverfront Stadium. And the "in thing" to be doing is watching Cincinnati Reds baseball. There's always something going on. It all starts Opening Day. The Reds always play host to the traditional National League Opener, symbolic of them being baseball's first professional team. And that's only a beginning. Teen Nites, College Nite, the Kid Glove Game, the Old-Timers Game, Bat Day, Picture Day . . . are just many of the special attractions at the showplace on the banks of the Ohio.

Gary Nolan (center)

At age 23, Gary Nolan is the dean of the Reds pitching staff in terms of service. In his 4½ years, he has pitched in 144 games, 982 innings and owns a 61-42 record. Record-wise, the 1971 season will not register as one of Gary's best. "As far as I'm concerned, I pitched better in 1971 than I did in 1970 when I won 18 games," Gary said. His mark was 12-15 but in seven of the setbacks he allowed three or fewer runs. Three times he was shutout and once was the victim of a no-hitter. On another occasion he allowed just one hit — a two-run homer to Denny Doyle — and lost. In one personal five-game losing streak the Reds scored only three runs. Gary was the Reds leader in innings pitched (245) and strikeouts (146). His ERA of 3.17 was better than his 3.26 of 1970. Gary was the Reds No. 1 draft choice in 1966.

Tony Cloninger (left)

Tony's finest hours in 1971 came during spot starting assignments. Two games stand out. He defeated Philadelphia May 21, finding out only 10 minutes before game time that he would pitch. And he blanked Montreal June 29 on a four-hitter for his only complete game. Primarily, though, Tony was in the bullpen as a long man. He started only eight of the 28 games he appeared in.

Jack Billingham (below)

Jack is as versatile as a pitcher can be. He has been a starter, long relief man and late inning specialist. Billingham started all 33 games he appeared in last year at Houston. He was 10-16. This was a complete turnaround from 1968 when he broke in with the Dodgers. That year he pitched in 50 games, 49 in relief. He was a reliever again in 1969. He made the transition to starter in 1970, starting 24 times.

Youth on the mound

A great emphasis in baseball today is being placed on youth, and there is no greater proof than in the Cincinnati Reds starting rotation.

Manager Sparky Anderson's Big Four total just 89 years. Gary Nolan started the season at age 23. Wayne Simpson is 23, Ross Grimsley is 22 and Don Gullett reached 21 last January.

Not only do these four men have youth on their side, but they have a great deal of natural physical ability, too. All are blessed with strong arms, the essential ingredient of a good pitcher.

Being young doesn't automatically constitute success, but figures and statistics back these pitchers up.

Take Nolan, for instance. He's already won 62 games in the big leagues. And Gullett. At age 20 he had the sixth best earned run average in the National League and pitched 16 victories. Simpson and Grimsley, too, have displayed winning ability.

Collectively, the quartet have many things in common. Individually, they are quite different.

All four were top Reds draft choices. Nolan came first, the No. 1 pick in June, 1966. Then came Simpson, likewise No. 1 in June, 1967. Grimsley and Gullett were signed in 1969. Ross was the No. 1 secondary phase selection in February and Gullett was the initial pick in June's regular phase.

No one could fault a youngster who emulated any one of

Ed was extremely impressive after being called up to the Reds last September. He gave up only eight hits in 11 innings and allowed just two runs, both unearned. His first National League victory came over the Giants. Sprague spent most of the 1968 and 1969 seasons with Oakland as a relief pitcher.

Ross Grimsley (right)

Ross made his major league debut in 1971, and if the season was any indication, he has a long, successful pitching career ahead of him. The 21-year old southpaw posted a 10-7 record and 3.51 ERA, taking over a spot in the starting rotation after being called up from Indianapolis on May 13. He had six complete games in 26 starts and fired three shutouts. Ross was the Reds No. 1 draft choice in the special phase of the 1969 Winter draft. He aroused attention hurling his American Legion team in Memphis to the national title in 1968.

A walking batting encyclopedia

Pete Rose

Pete batted .300 for the seventh straight year in 1971 to join some elite company. Only two active players have accomplished this feat — Willie Mays and Roberto Clemente. Rose is a walking encyclopedia on batting tips and tricks. "I think a .300 batting average is the secret to a lot of things," Pete said. "It means you're right around 200 hits. It means you'll be scoring about 100 runs and it means you'll likely have a winner." Rose has several goals he's chasing.

"I'd like to get 3,000 hits," Pete added. "And I'd like to average 200 hits a

Morgan means speed

Joe Morgan

Speed has been synonymous with Joe Morgan since the little second baseman came into the National League in 1965. One of the fastest runners in the game, Morgan has stolen 40 or more bases the past three seasons. He has stolen 131 out of 165. "I don't believe in stealing bases just to steal," Morgan said. "I believe you should steal to put yourself in better scoring position. I could have stolen 60 a year if I had wanted to." Joe is optimistic about playing at Riverfront Stadium. He batted only .220 in the Astrodome last year, but hit .286 on the road. "It was really hard to pick up the spin on the ball in Houston," Joe added. "And Riverfront is a much easier place to play defense. This should take some pressure off me also."

Reds scouts scour the country

Under the guidance of Director of Scouting Joe Bowen, the Reds have one of the finest group of scouts in baseball. This is evidenced by both the quality and quantity of players in the Reds organization.

A total of 17 full time scouts scour the country, checking and double checking the top prospects. In addition 22 part-time scouts and many recommending scouts ("bird dogs") aid in the search for talent.

To insure maximum coverage of the free agent field on a year-round basis, the Reds annually conduct a "scouting with the weather" program. The program utilizes the supervisors living in the North who would be hampered by inclement winter weather. These northern scouts head South and West for Florida, Texas, Arizona and California to continue their efforts giving the Reds the best coverage.

The Reds signed a total of 43 players last year and have corralled approximately 150 players in the past three years.

Much time is spent hunting the lesser known amateur players. The Reds operate under the theory that each major league team is familiar with the highly regarded prospects. Outfielder Ken Griffey and pitcher Dave Tomlin, on the Reds roster this year, are examples of this. Both were 29th round selections.

Cincinnati also utilizes the try-out camp. Many are conducted each year. Gene Locklear, the Most Valuable Player of the Eastern League last year, was signed out of a North Carolina try out camp.

that includes farm system, scouting, Sparky and the coaches — spends that much time analyzing our needs and the areas in which we feel we can improve ourselves. This was typical of our trades last winter. Obviously, we prefer to get help and strengthen ourself through our farm system. But if we can't, then we examine the rosters of other clubs and put together a list of logical trades. Trades which would be logical for both clubs. Certainly no other club is going to try to make a bad trade. Then it's just a matter of getting together with the other general manager. But first and foremost throughout the trading we are guided by the desire to improve our own club.

Q. How is AstroTurf changing the game of baseball?

A. I think it's making our game better. AstroTurf is not the answer to everything, but with today's multiple purpose stadiums, it's almost a necessity. Why if there were rain during an August football game, the baseball field would never be the same the rest of the season. The constant, bright green color is eye-appealing for the fan. I've seen more exciting fielding plays in a year and a half at Riverfront than I saw in almost four years at Crosley Field. The ball bounces true. We no longer have to teach a fielder to get his body in front of a ball to block it in the event of a bad hop. The turf provides surer footing, and despite what some have said, our studies indicate it probably reduces the chance of injury. Also, the ball moves faster on the turf and this places a greater premium on speed and defense. And we think those ingredients make the game much more appealing to the fan.

Q. What are you doing to increase baseball's popularity?

A. With all due respect to the Harris poll, which was taken at the height of football season, I don't think interest in baseball has ever been higher. I agree with Commissioner Kuhn that our game is on the verge of a great growth period. New stadiums are more attractive to the fans, and they give us empty seats on certain days which we use to interest youngsters in baseball. Our Straight A program rewards top students in grades 7 through 12 for academic performance. And we have days for our Future Reds Fans, the Safety Patrol, Knotholers, and other groups. Our Teen Nite, College Nite, Bat Day, and other promotions are primarily geared toward the ticket-buying public of five, 10, 15 years hence.

Q. What have you got against basketball?

A. I have nothing against the sport of basketball. In fact, I played the game for nine years, including a couple years of AAU ball. But my job is to put the best baseball team possible on the field in Reds uniforms and when something affects this — something like our players getting injured playing basketball — then I am concerned. Our studies — and believe me, we've done considerable research and fact-finding on the subject — show that players not used to the moves demanded of a basketball player run a much higher risk of injury when playing competitively. The lack of proper conditioning and proper warming up concerns us. And so does the opposition. Basketball is a contact sport, and when teams composed of coaches and alumni go up against our players, it is a match between two groups of very competitive persons. Hard contact is only natural. No one wants to lose or be embarrassed. As I said, our concern in this area is the physical well-being of our players. We have one very graphic example of the effect of a basketball injury. We want to profit by the experience.

Q. What is the situation in the Reds farm system?

A. It's one of the bright spots in our entire organization. We've doubled our scouting force since coming to Cincinnati and the products of our efforts in this area are now on our double-A and A clubs. A good farm system isn't built overnight. When we came here our staff sat down and rated the players in our farm system, and we felt there were between seven and eleven major league prospects. Today we rate about 50 of our youngsters with major league potential. They can run and hit, and they have fine arms, and some have power. We don't want to rush their progress. Sometimes you have to when you need help at the major league level and can't acquire it any other way. But in general, we like a boy to play a year under each of our four minor league managers. This way he gets the benefit of all their fine teaching and instruction. Some of the names? Burdick, Griffey, Spencer, Locklear, Younigblood, Dreissen, Polczynski, Ruddell, Jackson, Carroll, McEhaney, Zachry and many, many more.

Q. What has been your biggest disappointment since coming to Cincinnati?

A. Not repeating as National League champion in 1971.

Q. And your biggest accomplishment since coming to Cincinnati?

A. Building an organization which I feel is second to none in baseball. We have as fine a front office personnel as there are in the game — from the scouting and farm system through to our ticket department, speakers bureau, promotions and sales and administrative departments. Also, it's satisfying putting together a team with the kind of high-type, class men like we have on our club. I'm proud of our team — our manager, our coaches and our players. They play aggressive and exciting baseball. I think this is reflected in our attendance, which despite our small metropolitan area has been outstanding. Without a doubt the crowds and their support have been the most gratifying things to me.

season for my career. I'll need a few big years and the next four or five are really important to me."

Pete's career mark of .309 is fifth best among active National Leaguers. He has 1,724 hits, better than halfway to the 3,000 figure. He has avoided long slumps since coming to the major leagues in 1963 when he earned Rookie of the Year honors. He has made himself into one of the game's best hitters. He seldom strikes out. He is by far the best active switch-hitter. Pete spends hours in the batting cage when he feels there is a flaw in his swing.

"Pete is a self-made person," Manager Sparky Anderson explained. "No one jumped out of their shoes to sign him when he got out of high school. He made himself into what he is and to do that you've got to be a competitor. No one can judge himself. When you look into that mirror and can say I gave 100 per cent today, you know you've done all you could do. Pete Rose can do that every day."

Rose never seems to run out of energy. His omnipresent style of play is envied by thousands of fans. He has popularized the belly slide. In a poll of major league players by Sport Magazine, they voted him baseball's greatest competitor.

"It's an attitude," Pete noted. "It's wanting to win all the time no matter what the score and being willing to do whatever it takes to produce a win."

Pete hopes to get off to a good start. Slow starts have held him back the last three years. His April and May average is a combined .280. He's looking for that one "super year" that would win him another batting championship and put him into position to challenge some of the records of baseball's greatest hitters.

the four. All are dedicated to becoming major league stars. Each is quiet, reserved and humble. Success certainly has not spoiled them.

Gary Nolan is the dean of the Reds pitching staff in terms of service. He streaked on to the major league scene in 1967, leaping from the Class A Northern League. He was a strikeout pitcher then. He whiffed 206 batters that first year, only 22 off the National League record for a rookie.

He was a thrower, then, too. But now he's a pitcher, preferring the batter to hit his first offering. Two bouts of arm trouble — in 1968 and 1969 — were enough to convince Gary that there was more to pitching than throwing aspirin tablets.

"I used to think all you had to do was throw hard," Gary said. "But I've changed my thinking about that. You can't overpower hitters forever. They will get you sooner or later. I'm a pitcher now, not a thrower. Now with a fast ball, curve ball and change it's tough for a hitter to go up there looking for one pitch. It's a definite advantage for me."

Like Nolan, Simpson has experienced arm trouble. Big Wayne was the sensation of the major leagues in the first half of 1970. He was almost unbeatable. He had a 13-1 record and the world was in the palm of his hand.

"I was pitching against the Cubs," Simpson vividly recalls. "I threw a fast ball to Billy Williams and the whole shoulder gave away. I finished the inning but couldn't raise my arm before the next inning started."

That was on July 31, 1970 and now Wayne is working his way back. He spent time in the minor leagues last year — just as Nolan did on two occasions during his development from thrower to pitcher — and then worked hard in the Florida Instructional League. The arm was sound in Florida. Now it's the confidence that must be regained.

Gullett also made the jump from Class A to the major leagues in one year. After signing out of Southshore McKell, Ky., High School, Gullett spent the rest of the summer at Sioux Falls. He rode buses only one year. He made the team the following spring, making good an invitation to attend spring training as a non-roster player.

The Nike-armed lefthander hasn't disappointed Anderson. He was a standout in the bullpen in 1970 and last year became one of the pitching stars of the National League.

Many liken Gullett to Sandy Koufax. Some scouts rate Gullett's fast ball alongside Koufax' in velocity. And in 1971, like the former Dodger who is now in the Hall of Fame, Gullett had the knack of performing the sensational thing.

He nearly pitched a no-hitter, working seven-and-a-third hitless innings against the Cubs before Cleo James spoiled that bid with a blooping double to right. Time after time Don thrilled thousands of fans at Riverfront Stadium. It was home, sweet, home to him. He had a 10-1 mark and 1.67 ERA before the home crowds.

"It's going to be a pleasure to watch this boy pitch," Anderson mused. "Just think how good he's going to be when he gets another couple of years of experience under his belt."

Like Gullett, Grimsley is a hard-throwing southpaw. His trip to the major leagues was short, too . . . one year in Class A ball, one season in Class AAA, and six games at the beginning of another. He arrived in Cincinnati May 13 and went on to win 10 games last season.

As many youngsters are, Ross was inconsistent at times. "I'd get the ball up," Ross observed, "and when you do that bad things start happening to you."

These four aren't the only young pitchers the Reds are pleased about. There are others in the minors too. The Rudells, the Jacksons, the Osburns, the Carrolls are waiting for their shot at the major leagues. The future is certainly looking bright for the Reds pitching staff.

Youth on the mound, it's hard to beat it.

the dugout club...something special for your family's youngest fans

Where's the gang headed? To join the Shillito's-Partridge Reds Dugout Club, of course! That's where boys and girls can meet and shake hands with Reds players at every meeting . . . maybe they'll win a door prize, too! And at each meeting Little Leaguers might be chosen Honorary Batboy and the girl who roots the loudest might win the Little Miss Rosie Reds title. It's lots of fun . . . and best of all it's free! To join, just stop in the Boys' or Girls' Shops at any Shillito's store.
